father schemes to trade her dowry for a title—and Marchioness of Rutherford will do nicely. Charlotte wants her independence, not a husband, and certainly not a disreputable devil who renders her weak and wobbly with a single scorching glance. But she's a practical sort, and a year with the devil might buy her freedom ... provided she can resist his seductive charms. That shouldn't prove a problem, for he could not possibly want someone like her, and the feeling is mutual. Really. It is. Love grows in the most unexpected places... When her father demands a startling price for his daughter's hand—one year of fidelity and sobriety—Chatham must change his libertine ways ... at least temporarily. And when he does, Charlotte begins to see him in a new light—not as the scandalous charmer she married, but as the husband she just might adore.

Originally published 1931, this book contains the substance of the Cambridge University Yorke Prize Essay for 1923. The text discusses the equity of redemption in terms of its characteristics, its historical development and connection with equitable estates generally. The subject matter was obtained by a study of every case on mortgages found in the Chancery Reports up to the year 1750, and numerous cases in the common law reports found by reference. For the reports concerning mortgages after that date, a selection was made from textbooks on the area. Various indices and an appendix section are also included. This book will be of value to anyone with an interest in the equity of redemption and legal history.
